

MUCH NEEDED RAIN FINALLY ARRIVED

Jackson County Visited By Heaviest Showers Since the March Flood.

SOME DAMAGE BY LIGHTNING

Large Barn, Belonging to William Borcharding, Destroyed—Quadde Home is Struck.

The heaviest rain that has visited Jackson county since March fell Tuesday night and today and was of untold value in reviving the crops that were scorched by the long drought and intense heat of the past few weeks. A heavy rain fell in all parts of the county and greatly encouraged the farmers, who were much concerned over the outcome of the late corn crop in some sections of the county. The rain was preceded by an electrical display and during the storm there were vivid flashes of lightning accompanied by sharp peals of thunder. Some damage was done by the lightning and a few of the telephone lines are out of commission today.

A large barn belonging to William Borcharding, who lives five miles southeast of Vallonia, was struck by lightning during the storm and totally destroyed by fire. The barn was one of the largest in Driftwood township. In the building was a large amount of hay which was also burned. There was no stock in the barn but a few farming implements were lost. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

The residence of William Quadde in Brownstown township was struck by lightning this morning but only a small damage was done. The chimney was torn from the dwelling and bricks were scattered about the yard. Several rooms were filled with dust and soot but fortunately none of the members of the family were hurt.

During the storm this morning, the electric light plant of the Interstate Public Service Company was put out of commission for several hours. The current went out about eight o'clock and permanent service was not restored until after eleven o'clock. Lightning struck one of the wires and blew out a fuse at the plant during one of the morning showers, but the principal trouble was caused by a wire becoming short circuited on a tree. The insulation on much of the wire is worn off and trouble is experienced whenever the trees become wet. It was sometime before the trouble was located, but as soon as the short circuit was found linemen had little trouble in repairing the break.

All the lights, motors and fans in the city were out of use until the short-circuit was repaired. Factories and other plants depending upon electrical power were greatly inconvenienced as not a wheel of the machinery could turn.

The rain was sufficient to replenish many of the wells and cisterns with water and was welcomed in sections of the county where the water supply was becoming serious. In some places the farmers were compelled to haul water for some distance for domestic use and for their stock. Many of the streams and ponds had disappeared during the past few weeks and the water supply on some farms was a question of great concern.

The rain will be of much benefit to the maturing corn and other late crops. Doubtless, much of the corn that was believed to be in a dying condition will revive with the much needed moisture and a good crop will be harvested. Melon growers are especially pleased with the rain as it came as an opportune time for them.

MANY WITNESSES CALLED IN ASSAULT AND BATTERY CASE

Bridge Foreman Found Not Guilty and Two Prosecuting Witnesses Are Arrested.

The trial of the case of the State of Indiana against Aaron Uland, in which he was charged with assault and battery, held Tuesday night before Justice of Peace John Congdon, took an unusual turn when two of the prosecuting witnesses were arrested upon the order of Deputy Prosecutor Wesner after the defendant was found not guilty. Uland, whose home is at Vincennes, is a foreman of the Vincennes Bridge Company and is supervising the construction of the Indian Creek Bridge in Hamilton township. The alleged trouble occurred between the bridge foreman and Sam Anderson, William Thompson and John Rose, all of Hamilton township, several days ago.

Considerable interest was manifested in the trial by Hamilton township people and more than twenty-five citizens were here to attend the trial. About twenty were subpoenaed as witnesses. Judge John M. Lewis was attorney for the defendant and Deputy Prosecutor Wesner looked after the state's interests. The court room was crowded with spectators who seemed to enjoy the unusual legal proceedings.

According to the evidence it appeared that the three young men, who were prosecuting witnesses, had worked for the foreman several weeks ago and they claim that they were promised employment later. Thursday they drove up the bridge and say that they asked him about the work. Uland and other witnesses testified that two of the young men used vile language to which Uland took exception because of the presence of his wife. Anderson, the defendant says, drew a knife and started to climb out of the vehicle when Uland struck him. Anderson was charged with provoke and Rose with carrying concealed weapons. They both pleaded guilty and were fined $1 and costs. About seventeen witnesses testified in behalf of the bridge foreman.

Miss Lillie Robertson, an inmate of the county poor asylum, was judged insane after an examination in Justice E. H. Kinney's court Saturday afternoon, and application has been made to have her admitted to the state institution at North Madison. That her mental breakdown was not due to any inherited tendency, but to general nervous weakness, probably due to disappointment and worry, was the belief of the examiners.—Columbus Republican.

Dr. A. Ruddick arrived home Tuesday afternoon from an extended trip through the West. He is much improved in health. He will continue his practice again.

WAGE DISPUTE MAY BE SETTLED SOON

Organization of Labor Union on I. C. & S. Will be Determined Shortly.

NO DEMANDS HAVE BEEN MADE.

Employees Joining Union Have Been Asked to Pay $5.50 as Initiation Fee.

Whether or not the proposed union on the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern Traction Line is organized will be decided within the next two or three weeks. The situation remains unchanged and it is not known what the next step will be. The motormen and conductors decline to make any statement regarding the threatened strike and the officials of the road declare that they have not been officially informed of any move that would indicate that the men are dissatisfied.

It is said that an organizer for the union has been collecting $5.50 from each conductor and motorman, who joined the organization, this being the amount of the initiation fee. An Indianapolis attorney is reported to have an interest in the proposed union and with the organizer is formulating plans, which will be carried out on the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern Line. Quite a number of the motormen and conductors have joined the organization, but is reported that some of them are not as enthusiastic about the union as they were some time ago. It is said that a few of the employees have refused to pay their initiation fee until it is definitely known what action will be taken by the organization.

The management of the traction company has received information that the proposed union is not affiliated with other traction unions in the state, but this report cannot be verified. The conductors and motormen are of the opinion that their union was to be a branch of one which will be formed on all Indiana traction lines and the report will be investigated before some of them will consent to affiliate.

Thus far no demand has been made by the conductors or motormen for higher wages nor for recognition of the union. These were the principal points of contention when the dispute originated and may be fought out later. A meeting was held at Indianapolis Monday night, is reported, but the employees who attended refuse to make public any action that was taken at that time. It is said by the company's officials that the discharge of the three men has nothing whatever to do with the organization of the new union and no request has ever been filed asking that these employees be reinstated.

TENDER OF B. & O. ENGINE NO. 401 FOUND IN RIVER

Workmen Succeed in Pulling it From Blue Hole, Near Washington—Went Down in March.

The tender of B. & O. Southwestern engine 401, the locomotive that carried four men to death in the Blue Hole tragedy near Washington, March 27, will soon be in the shops. A wrecking crew from the Washington shops was sent to the Blue Hole Tuesday morning to recover the tender which was found about seventy-five feet south of the trestle in the hole.

Several unsuccessful attempts were made to locate the tender following the catastrophe and for a while it was believed that it was buried under some of the huge piles of sand in the fill south of the hole. Recently, however, the tender was discovered in the hole.

Workmen have succeeded in pulling the tender from the water and they will soon have it in the shops.

REV. J. A. WHITE WILL LEAVE U. B. CHURCH AT WASHINGTON

Minister, Well Known In This County, Will Go To Larger Charge.

It is now definitely known that the Rev. J. A. White, who for four years has been the pastor of the First U. B. church, will leave Washington with the coming of the conference to be held at Odon, beginning on Wednesday, August 20, says the Washington Herald. The Rev. Mr. White is the son of Mrs. Mary A. White, of this city, and formerly lived at Surprise.

The Rev. Mr. White has not definitely decided where he will go but at this time he has in view several places in the St. Joe conference, which comprises the counties of northern Indiana, and he is also looking over the Ohio field. However, he will determine this matter within the next few days. The Rev. Mr. White came to Washington four years ago and by his persistent pushing of church matters and his pleasant manners, has forged to the front with his congregation and clustered about himself many warm friends of other denominations who join with his membership in offering regrets at his departure to fields of greater activities for which he is capable in every respect.

During his stay in Washington he has been instrumental in collecting, outside of running expenses, the sum of $1,761.55, which has been applied in wiping away a church debt. The congregation looked upon his services to such a value that the salary has been increased $300 over that received by his predecessor. One hundred and sixty members have been received during his stewardship and ninety-five conversions recorded. Three persons have been given a license to preach, two of these are now taking a college course at Indiana Central university at Indianapolis, and the other now in the Bonebrake Theological seminary at Dayton, Ohio. One deaconess has been consecrated to christian work through the direction of the departing pastor. Sixty baptisms are noted, forty-eight funerals have been held under his care, thirty-seven couples have been started along the matrimonial path and during the four years the Rev. Mr. White has delivered 800 regular sermons and special addresses.

The first session of the Indiana conference will be held next Wednesday in the Odon U. B. church in charge of the Rev. G. M. Matthews, D. D., of Chicago. The conference promises to be an interesting one as many questions of vital importance to the church will be taken up and disposed of, and it will be at this conference that official notice will be given by the Rev. Mr. White of his plans to leave the conference. Bishop Matthews, who will be in charge of conference deliberations, presided at the conference held in Washington two years ago and has many friends here who will probably visit the church dignitary during his stay in northern Davies.

GOVERNOR SULZER LOSES LONG FIGHT

William Sulzer Impeached By New York Legislature for "High Crimes" After All-night Session.

WIFE TRIED TO TAKE BLAME

Told Committee That She Used Campaign Funds in Dealing in the Stock Markets.

Albany, Aug. 13.—Governor William Sulzer was impeached at 5:16 o'clock this morning by the Democratic majority in the assembly of the New York legislature. The vote, 79 to 45, came after an all-night session and after the Governor's wife had made an eleventh hour effort to save him at the risk of sacrificing her own reputation.

Organization leaders who have sparred for time all night in the fear that their program of impeachment would be wrecked by lack of votes, welcomed new-comers to the assembly chamber, summoned from New York, during the early hours, and, assured of victory by their presence, started a rapid fire of legislation with the adoption of the impeachment resolution.

It was explained to the assembly by the majority leaders that the presentation to the senate of the articles of impeachment William Sulzer would automatically cease to be Governor and Martin H. Glynn, Lieutenant-Governor, would assume his office. Mr. Sulzer's lawyers, however, entertain a different view.

After the adoption of the articles of impeachment, the assembly quickly passed a resolution appointing nine managers to conduct the impeachment proceedings on behalf of the lower house.

In the light of the revelations contained in Mrs. Sulzer's declaration to Senator Palmer, late yesterday, Governor Sulzer's friends were inclined today to view the ordeal which confronts him with less apprehension than before his impeachment. By her assertion that she diverted part of the campaign contributions sent her husband to private purposes without his knowledge and used them to buy stock in Wall street, she has shorn the articles of impeachment of many of their terrors, his friends declare.

John Gossett, who recently left the City Hospital, where he underwent an operation for a fractured hip, is improving. He was able to walk down town with the aid of his crutches this morning. Mr. Gossett lost his left foot in a railroad accident at Vallonia several weeks ago.

SOMETHING NEW IN SULZER CASE

Remarkable Story of Those Campaign Checks.

INDORSED BY HIS WIFE

According to State Senator Palmer, Who Got the Story in an Incidental Conversation With Mrs. Sulzer, the Governor Never Saw Checks Which Figure in Impeachment Talk, His Wife Having Indorsed Them.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 13.—If the impeaching resolution is passed, and the leaders are confident they have more than the seventy-six votes that are necessary, articles of impeachment probably will be subscribed to by the assembly without further delay and they will be presented at once to the president of the senate.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Mrs. William Sulzer signed the campaign contribution checks which the Frawley committee in its report to the legislature charges were used by Governor Sulzer to buy securities, according to a statement made by Senator Abraham J. Palmer, who had a long talk with Mrs. Sulzer. Mrs. Sulzer verified the statement that she indorsed these checks.

Believing that Governor Sulzer would waste the money which these campaign contributions represented, Mrs. Sulzer, who is thrifty, thought there was no harm in signing the governor's name to them and depositing them. The remarkable statement made by Senator Palmer followed a conference with Mrs. Sulzer.

Senator Palmer, who is chairman of the state commission which is to erect a monument to the soldiers from New York state who died in Andersonville prison, went to the executive mansion to learn just when Governor and Mrs. Sulzer could arrange to make a visit to Andersonville, Ga., where the monument is to be dedicated this fall. He was told that Governor Sulzer was busy and he asked Mrs. Sulzer to influence the governor to arrange for a visit to Andersonville.

The subject which is foremost in the minds of the governor's household naturally cropped out during the senator's talk with Mrs. Sulzer, and for a long time they discussed the pros and cons of the situation in which the governor now finds himself. During the talk Mrs. Sulzer told Senator Palmer that the governor never signed the checks which the Frawley committee produced to show that he had misappropriated campaign funds.

"Senator," said Mrs. Sulzer, "it would surprise you, I suppose, if I told you that the governor never saw these checks and that I had indorsed them in the governor's name for deposit."

Started at this declaration, Senator Palmer asked Mrs. Sulzer to give him the details of these transactions. He questioned her closely and she explained that, knowing Governor Sulzer and his disposition to waste his own money, she thought it would be a good idea to indorse the checks and deposit them to the governor's credit. She was able to tell Senator Palmer the exact amount of each of the checks she deposited for the governor. The straightforward story told by Mrs. Sulzer and her absolute unconsciousness of having done anything that was not legal so impressed the senator that he confided the story to other legislators.

CONDITIONS ARE SERIOUS

Many Clashes Between Strikers and Troops at Barcelona.

Barcelona, Aug. 13.—The situation resulting from the strike here, which was believed to have been practically settled, has become worse. Only 1,000 workers have returned to the factories and 22,000 are still out. There have been many clashes between the strikers and the troops, the workers hurling stones at the soldiers, who charged repeatedly. Hundreds of women took part in the fighting.

It is feared that the railroad employees will declare a strike and the government is taking precautions with a view to preventing disturbances if the strike spreads into other provinces, which is believed probable.

Not Likely to Abdicate.

London, Aug. 13.—The report of the approaching abdication of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is authoritatively denied in London. It is semi-officially declared that he is the last man likely to do such a thing, besides which the Bulgarian nation, apart from its personal liking for the ruler, is convinced that it has nothing to gain and much to lose by his abdication.

Boys' Plait Causes Arrest.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 13.—John Leonard, a detective for the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad, was arrested charged with highway robbery. It is alleged that he held up two boys and, after taking their money, ordered them to "beat it." They did, to the police station, where they filed a complaint against the officer.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 13.—Governor Emmet O'Neal has appointed Congressman H. D. Clayton of Eufula, Third congressional district, as United States senator to succeed the late Senator Johnston, who died last Friday in Washington. The appointment is for the unexpired term which closes in 1915. The commission has been issued and it is now up to Senator Clayton to get the seat, advice having been received that the advice of senate leaders was that the governor would have to call a special session of the legislature before being able to make the appointment. However, later opinion rendered was to the effect that under Paragraph 3 of the Seventeenth amendment, providing for the election of senators by popular vote, does not affect the terms of present senators. Mr. Clayton will be a candidate for election before the people and will be opposed by Congressman R. P. Hobson, who has been in the senatorial race several months.

ARE REGARDED AS SIGNIFICANT

Important Developments in the Mexican Situation.

DIPLOMATIC SUPPORT ABROAD

Action of Both Great Britain and Japan Has Given Assurance of the Sympathy and Moral Support of the Powers Toward the Policy Which the President Has Formulated in Connection With Troublesome State of Things.

Paris, Aug. 13.—President Huerta of Mexico, in reply to a request sent to him by the Matin, cables as follows: "The uneasiness regarding the relations between Mexico and the United States is devoid of foundation."

Washington, Aug. 13.—Two developments have emphasized the probability that President Wilson will have the sympathy and moral support of the powers for the policy he has evolved for settling the Mexican problem.

One was the reported intimation by the Japanese government to the Mexican diplomatic representative at Tokio that the mikado will not receive General Felix Diaz, whom President Huerta has sent as special envoy to extend the thanks of Mexico for Japanese participation in the Mexican centennial celebration.

The other development that is regarded as significant is a statement by the British foreign office emphasizing the fact that Great Britain in recognizing the Huerta government made it clear that it regarded Huerta as a provisional president who was expected to rule only until a constitutional election was held.

These two developments bear out the statement already made, that President Wilson has reason to feel confident of the sympathy if not the active co-operation of the powers in his attempt in bringing peace to Mexico. The statement of the British government was given out in answer to recent comment that England's recognition of the Huerta government was procured by financial interests who desired to establish the provisional president upon a firmer footing. The administration was agreeably impressed by the action of the British foreign office as indicating at least a spirit of friendliness toward the mission on which John Lind has been sent to Mexico City. That the British foreign office has seen fit to make a public statement at this critical time is considered significant.

The action of the Japanese government in refusing General Diaz an audience with the mikado was regarded here as evidencing the resentment of Japan at the temerity of the Huerta government in permitting pro-Japanese demonstrations and fomenting pro-Japanese talk in Mexico City and Vera Cruz when it was known that these occurrences would be construed as anti-American in spirit. The demonstration referred to came a few weeks ago preceding the arrival of the new Japanese ambassador to Mexico, and it was evident that they were designed solely to express the friendliness of Mexicans toward Japan in the matter of her diplomatic difficulties with the United States over alien land legislation in California. The pro-Japanese talk was regarded here as purely artificial and intended to draw the United States into recognition of the Huerta government through fear of Mexican relations with Japan. It was at that time that President Huerta announced the appointment of General Diaz as a special envoy to visit Japan. Japanese officials were reported at the time as being displeased at the risk of antagonizing the United States against Japan which was involved in these demonstrations. It is believed that the intimation of the mikado's inability to receive Diaz grew out of this displeasure. General Diaz's party is still on the Pacific coast and doubtless its departure for Japan will be delayed until further details are obtained as to the attitude of Japan.

Mr. Bryan has been in communication with Charge O'Shaughnessy and Special Representative Lind. O'Shaughnessy reported that things were quiet at Mexico City and Lind's report brought no news of developments of any importance bearing on his mission.

QUIZ PROVING TOO MUCH FOR MULHALL

Old Lobbyist Has Severe Attack of "Nerves."

Washington, Aug. 13.—Martin M. Mulhall, "ex-colonel," was "taken sick to his stummock" before the house lobby investigation committee and upon application of his counsel the "informer" was excused from further attendance for two days.

The ex-colonel was weak, he said, and nervous and his nerves had so affected his digestion as to make it very difficult for him to sit under the examination of the committee. He called the attention of the committee to his shaking hands and trembling lips, and after a long executive session the committee finally agreed that the witness was not physically able to stand further grilling.

James A. Emery, Washington counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, was a witness before the senate committee. He had an opportunity to explain the exact business relations between himself and Mulhall previous to Mulhall's break with the association. Mr. Emery explained that Mulhall acted as a "legislation information source," it being his duty to report the nature and status of pending legislation, results of his interviews with congressmen on labor and other legislation.

TELLS STORY OF DISGRACE

Chief Witness in the Diggs Case Goes on Stand.

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—Showing abundant evidence of the great strain under which she was laboring, but still collected enough to give direct answers to questions asked, Marsha Warrington began the recital of the tale which is expected to play such an important part in the trial of Maury Diggs for violation of the white slave law.

For an hour and a half the young woman replied steadily to the questions by which Assistant Attorney General Roche drew from her the story of her first acquaintance and friendship with Diggs, the course of intimidation by which she swore that the former state architect and his chum, Caminetti, induced her and Lola Norris to elope with them, and of the preparations for the runaway, and of the journey to Reno on March 10. She had her facts well in mind and in most instances answered promptly and directly to all questions. After it was over and court had adjourned she almost collapsed.

In cross-examination Attorney Coghill tried to make the witness admit she entered into the Reno elopement in a happy frame of mind and that she joined the party for the purpose of "having a good time."

Venezuelan Uprising a Fizzle.

THE CLERGY WAS DENOUNCED

Not Only That, but the Newspapers That Gave Publicity to Ministers' Attempts to Throw Light on Dark Places Came in For a "Flaying" in the Report Which Publicly Relieved the Mayor and Police of Blame.

Mishawaka, Ind., Aug. 13.—Flaying the newspapers and denouncing the clergy for undue activity in attempting to place officers of the city administration before the public in an unfavorable light, the common council as a committee of the whole signed a report exonerating Mayor John A. Herzog, Chief of Police Harvey C. Frick and other policemen from all blame in regard to the open violation of the liquor laws by saloon men. The chief of police was upheld in his refusal to accompany the Rev. L. E. Edwards to open saloons on a Sunday morning, the report indicating that it would have been humiliating for the chief to be led to a saloon through back alleys.

BROAD CEILING COLLAPSES

Seventy-Five Escape Death When Buried in Wreck.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 13.—Alma Furnas and Emma Rutley were seriously injured and a score of girls temporarily blinded when the ceiling of the second floor at the Miller Parrott Baking company plant collapsed.

Seventy-five women and girls were buried under the debris and panic prevailed. Dust filled the street and the crash attracted hundreds to the scene. Fire and police departments responded and rescued the women by taking them out through the second story windows.

It appeared miraculous that none of the employees were killed. Girls were taken out with garments torn to shreds. Immediate medical attention was given to save their eyes from dust. All except two were able to go home unaccompanied as soon as they recovered from the nervous shock.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Charles C. Rumsey, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, whose pearl necklace and other jewels valued at $175,000 were stolen from her summer home here has given up hope of their recovery. "The detective bureau has no definite clue in the case," she said.

PATIENT KILLED BY AN INSANE SURGEON

While Performing Operation
Doctor Went Wild.

Cincinnati, Aug. 13.—In the common pleas court a strange and frightful case was presented when Judge Cushing committed to Longview asylum for the insane, near this city, Dr. William R. Dabney, whose residence is given as Marietta, Ohio. His wife, Mrs. Kate Dabney, asked that he be examined for admission to the asylum. Judge Cushing was told Dr. Dabney first showed symptoms of insanity last fall while performing a surgical operation in a hospital at Marietta, when he suddenly commenced slashing wildly with his operating knife, and although assistants tried to restrain him, his patient was killed. Dr. Dabney was then taken to Canada by his wife with the hope that his mind would be regained, but as he showed no improvement he finally was brought to this city.

FAULTY RAIL ALWAYS PERIL.

Probably Worst Danger Known to Railroad, and Constant Watchfulness Only Minimizes It.

Only a few days ago a broken rail caused a railroad accident which might easily have resulted in serious loss to life. A passenger train was derailed and by a miracle the cars came to a standstill just before piling over the edge of bank into a swollen river. This is an illustration of the peril of the unsound rail.

During the three months ended January 1 of the current year 2,967 persons were killed and 51,323 were injured on steam railroads in the United States. There were 1,859 collisions and 2,135 derailments. Passenger trains were concerned in 229 of the collisions and 194 of the derailments.

The property losses reached the total of $3,408,953, and this sum covered only the damage to the rolling stock, etc., belonging to the railroads. Calculated at this rate the railroads would suffer annually in this manner a loss of substantially $14,000,000, and the public has to pay for this in the end. The additional sums that would be involved in lawsuits and the payment of damage claims would run the aggregate yearly drain, due to negligence or mechanical failures, into many millions of dollars more.

Broken rails and fractured wheels were mainly responsible for the casualties, and 71 per cent. of all of the derailments were occasioned by defective roadway or equipment, while nearly 24 per cent. of the derailments were caused by broken rails. Shattered or fractured wheels were accountable for 26.5 per cent. of the derailments.

Collisions can mostly be avoided through proper alertness on the part of responsible employees, but there is something insidious about the peril of the faulty rail. To the casual eye of the track walker the rail may be seemingly sound, and yet within the substance of its head or the thinner material of the supporting web a catastrophe may be lurking. Unseen, the steel may be yielding and at the next blow the rail may be shattered and a speeding train hurled from its course.

UNDER FIVE MILES IN LENGTH

England Has No Fewer Than Ten Railroads With a Trackage That is Insignificant.

Altogether there are ten railroads in various parts of the country which are under five miles in length. The shortest line is that of the Felixstowe Dock and Railroad company, which runs from the Great Eastern line at Felixstowe Beach station, in Suffolk, down to Felixstowe dock. It is only 726 yards long, its entire rolling stock consisting of 12 freight cars.

The next shortest is the Milford Haven Dock company's railroad, which is only a mile and a quarter in length, and which was opened in 1882. It runs from Milford Haven on the Great Western railroad to Newton Noyes pier, and its rolling stock consists of one locomotive and 21 freight cars.

The Stockbridge railroad is one mile seven furlongs in length, and has one locomotive, two passenger carriages and 68 freight cars. It runs from Deepcar, near Sheffield, on the Great Central, to Stockbridge.

The Rye & Cambridge Steam tramway is two and a half miles long, and possesses two locomotives, two passenger coaches and three freight cars, while the South Shields, Marsden & Whitburn railroad is a mile and three-quarters long, and runs from South Shields to Whitburn colliery, says the English Railway Magazine.

In Cumberland there is the Rowrah & Kelton Fell Mineral railroad, three miles long, which connects with the Furness railroad.

The nearest of these tiny railroads to London is the Corringham Light railroad, which starts at Covingham, about three miles from Stamford-le-Hope, in Essex, and runs to Kynochtown. The rolling stock consists of two locomotives, two passenger vehicles and ten freight cars.

IMPORTANT CHANGES FOR THE PARCEL POST SYSTEM

Maximum Weight to be Increased From 11 to 20 Pounds Friday—Lower Rates.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Important changes in the operation of the parcel post system, recently inaugurated by Postmaster General Barleson, will become effective Friday. They include an increase in the maximum weight limit on packages from 11 to 20 pounds, a reduction in the rates of postage within the first and second zones and the substitution of a convenient rate chart for the elaborate parcel post map in determining postage rates.

The second part of the order is that perishable goods may be sent anywhere within a radius of 150 miles. Heretofore perishable goods were received only for local delivery.

The third section of the order, and the section which is causing the railroads to protest vigorously before congress at Washington, is the marked lowering of the parcel post rates.

The first pound costs 5 cents for mailing within the 150 mile radius, as heretofore, but whereas under the old order the cost was 4 cents for each additional pound costs only 1 cent.

As an example of the decrease in rates, after August 15, eleven pounds of matter may be sent by parcel post for 15 cents anywhere within a radius of 150 miles from St. Joseph. Under the present rates the same delivery would cost 46 cents.

Postmaster-General Barleson has received a great number of protests from express companies throughout the country, but announced that they would not affect his decision, which is supported by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

SAMPLE BOTTLE OFTEN PROVES BENEFICIAL

Some time ago I was afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble and was unable to obtain any relief from other medicines so sent for a sample bottle of your Swamp-Root. I received so much benefit from this small bottle that I purchased a large bottle from the druggist. I continued the use of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root until I regarded myself as cured and am now in good health. I recommended it to a neighbor who has used it with the same results.

I regard your remedy, Swamp-Root, as a preparation that will do all you claim for it.

Indiana Women at the State Fair

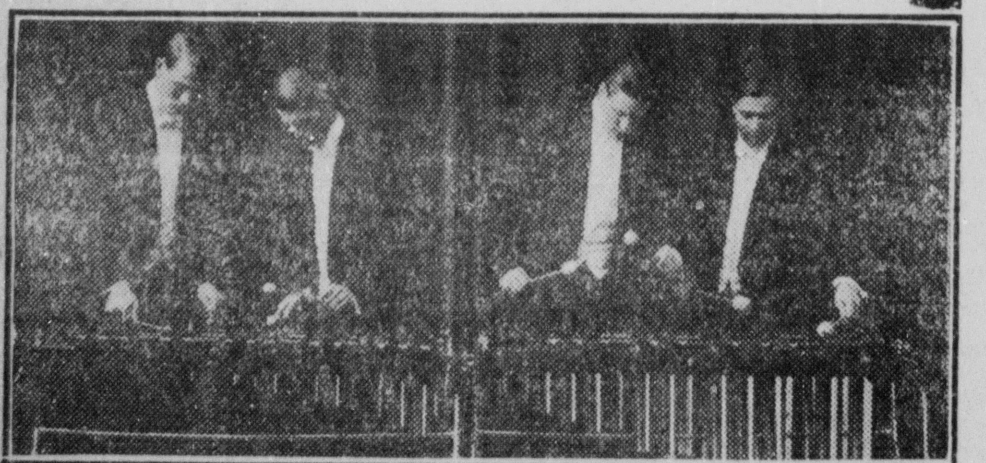

The women of Indiana, whether from town or farm, will find the state fair rich in attractions for them during the week of September 8. While the whole exposition, including band concerts, live stock, horse shows, races, vaudeville, machinery and general sight seeing will team with interest for these visitors, there are numerous departments which every year especially appeal to them.

The chief center of the women's interest is the art building. It will contain one of the greatest displays of hand painted china ever made by Indiana artists, for each year the large show cases in this building are filled to capacity with this highly decorated ware, making it plain that the Indiana artists are in the forefront as producers of these artistic creations. Needlework in great variety, paintings, drawings, photographs, examples of brass, leather and other craftsmanship, most of it done by Indiana women, will be shown in profusion.

Throughout these departments the Indiana women find the fair fruitful in new ideas for better home making—ideas which are both educational and inspirational which Hoosier women can apply to their own homes and families.—Adv.

THE MUSIC MAKERS' QUARTET.

MUSIC MAKERS' FOURTH SEASON. The Music Makers' Quartet have been before the public for four years and last winter toured extensively in the south and the past summer on the western Chautauquas. They have excellent voices. There is also plenty of novelty in their program.

The Music Makers carry with them the largest marimbaphone ever built for the Lyceum. This instrument has been known to the Lyceum comparatively short time, and in its present state it may be said to be new to the world, although the principle of producing tone from different lengths of the hard wood is one of the earliest forms of music making. The modern application of the principle, that of connecting powerful resonators with each key and producing the tone with felt covered hammers, is a wonderful development, the resonators creating the volume and the soft hammers beautifying the quality. The effect might be said to suggest that of a powerful harp.

The vocal quartet of this company, their vocal solos, the readings which are given by one of the company and the marimbaphone numbers in all comprise an unusually enjoyable evening.

Advertising Talks

ADVERTISING IS LIKE TEACHING

Constant Repetition Necessary to Secure Results of Real Value.

"Advertising," writes a man who has thoroughly studied the subject, "is a broad term. A great deal of advertising is merely published, for the sake of giving information and not with any indefinite idea of creating a favorable attitude in the public mind. A person may obtain information from books on any subject, but the teacher would not encourage this as the best method of developing the mind, or securing an education. The successful method, adopted by the teacher, as evolved by some of the world's greatest thinkers, is based on the fact, that our memory retains those things, which are repeated again and again. Such things as the multiplication table and spelling, become so firmly fixed in the mind, as to be almost instinctive. Advertising, to be successful, must accept this same psychological fact, as its basis.

"Let us consider, for example, how one is taught to speak German. Suppose you devote two hours, each day for a year, to this study, you would unquestionably acquire some knowledge of the language; but, if you merely devote an hour or two a week, the same period, little would be accomplished; or if you devote two hours, each day, for three or four months, then stop three or four months, begin again for a similar period and discontinue your study again, your mind would retain comparatively little, by following such a plan. Follow the latter plan in advertising and the public will know little about your school. Follow the former plan and, at the end of the year, they will have a fair knowledge of what you offer. Suppose you keep up studying German, two hours each day, for a period of three years. At the end of that time you will have acquired such a knowledge of the language, that it will be really a part of yourself. Keep up an advertising campaign, persistently, for three years, and the knowledge of your institution will be as much a part of the mental make-up of the regular readers of the newspaper, in which you advertise, as the German language would be of your own, after consistent study. If you continue to devote some time, each day, year after year, to speaking, or reading German, you will retain what you have acquired and strengthen your ability as a German student. Keep up your advertising, year after year, and you will gain the cumulative effect.

"Suppose a student does study German, each day for a year. Does he know it all? Can he stop? No; he has only begun. Suppose the advertiser advertises, daily for a year. He may accomplish little, the first few months, but at the end of the year, he sees fair results. Can he stop? No; he has hardly begun. It may take a German student several years to really master the language and it may take you, as an advertiser, just as long to make your institution thoroughly well known. Suppose the student stops his practice in speaking and reading German. Gradually he will lose the knowledge, that he has acquired, while by devoting some time each day, he could have retained his knowledge. Let an advertiser stop advertising and it is surprising, how soon the public loses sight of him.

"There is both an art of teaching and a science underlying it. Both, to be successful, must influence the human mind. Much can be accomplished in teaching, by appealing to the emotional side. It is likewise true, that in advertising, it is possible to play upon the feelings of the reader. In both, however, it is necessary to take into consideration, how knowledge is acquired. Things, which are done over and over again, finally become, apparently automatic. The advertiser must present his case in a variety of ways, but must depend upon exactly the same method.

"The most important things to be remembered, in order to make a success of advertising, is that it takes time and constant repetition to secure results of real value. No lasting good can be accomplished in either teaching, or advertising, in any other way. Frequent repetition, extending over a considerable time, is absolutely necessary, and this frequent repetition can only be accomplished by newspaper advertising.

"Any kind of an announcement, a circular, a hand-bill, or a telephone message will give information. That, however, is not essentially advertising. If you want to make your name a household word, you must do it by the same method that the teacher uses,—frequent repetition."

It Finished Him.

There was a man who hustled not—
To luck he trusted;
He would not advertise a dot—
And so he rusted,
And likewise busted.

Republican Want Ads. Pay.

ADVERTISING TO GET RESULTS

The Right Kind Certain to Bring an Increase of Business for the Merchant.

Advertising is simple to some people and very difficult and complicated to others. The former class never spends a dollar on printing ink without the assurance of good returns. The other class sometimes spends thousands of dollars without the slightest result.

Is it a mystery? Not at all. A thoroughly experienced person can tell beforehand whether an advertising campaign will pay. It is not easy to say just what form of advertisement will give the best results, but it is easy enough to select the method of advertising which will give such results.

There is a right way and a wrong way of conducting an advertising campaign, and good advertisements and good mediums may prove worthless if the advertiser has chosen the wrong way.

Speaking generally, the mail-order system is one of the wrong ways, although it may pay individuals. It is merely a substitute, a temporary substitute, for the true and tried old system of retailing merchandise. Take the case of the retail grocer who sells a private blend of tea and who is trying to build a big demand through the mails. He may ultimately create a fair business by mail, but it should be obvious even to himself that a far wider outlet awaits a similar article pushed through the usual trade channels.

Mail order business is an unnatural business and is not likely to be a permanent feature of the country's commerce.

The magic of advertising? That's right. The magician's wand cannot do the expected job with one wave, however, nor can it work its wonders through a single class of mediums.

The public must be reached, and each of these branches of the advertising job must receive proper treatment. If one is neglected in the least there will be disappointment. The retailer's advertising task is, as a rule, much simpler than the manufacturer's, except, of course, when he wishes to push his own private brands into general distributive channels.

NEWSPAPERS WIDELY READ

Old Circus Manager Finds Them Better Today for Advertising Purposes Than Billboards.

"The billboards don't tell a story any more," said an old circus manager recently. "They were good when they were a novelty, and for that matter have uses yet, because there are exceptions to every rule, and a rule that won't bend will break.

"The newspapers create an atmosphere. You get right close to a man, and with his pocket and home. It's like being introduced to some one and taking him out to lunch to get better acquainted.

"In the circus world we have to get immediate results from our advertising. In most places we play only a day. It is too late to tell people what a good show we had after we have left town. There was a time when billboards told them this because the circus was practically alone in the field of great pictorial displays, but nowadays everything on the billboards is 'circused,' so we lose our 'punch.' Hundreds of men read the papers now where one read twenty or thirty years ago. They look to the newspapers to entertain, to instruct, to advise and direct. Births, deaths, marriages, prize fights, weather predictions, sermons. Wall street reports, near philosophy, the latest music for the turkey trot. Where do you go to find it? Just in the columns of the daily papers, of course, and I don't think I was wrong when I figured out that ninety per cent. of the people would look in the same place for information regarding the coming of the circus."

I object to the term "advertising expense." Right advertising is not an expense and never was. It is an investment, a business endowment policy, which, almost from the start can be made to pay its own premiums and a large profit, besides accumulating a fund that guarantees the advertiser every dollar of his investment.—"George Dyer."

Best Time to Impress Public. "If business men," says a Chicago writer, "lie down during the summer months, saying to themselves nothing can be accomplished in the heated season, they are taking a fatal view of business—fatal because neglect of any chance to add to the volume of their trade is a lost opportunity. The fault is their own.

"Such business men forget one powerful factor in advertising—the opportunity of the public to read advertisements.

"No period of the year affords such an opportunity as does the heated season. People ensconced in comfortable spots, feeling too indolent to engage in any active pursuit, turn to reading matter for a means of enjoyment, recreation and time-passing.

"In such a time, when business cares are laid aside temporarily, the mind is in the most receptive mood of any period of the year. Impressions made by reading are strongest and strong, pungent advertising forces itself on the attention in a way to fix the impressions gained indelibly on the mind."

The League of Lost Causes

By H. M. EGBERT Being the Romantic Adventures of Paul Lane, American Millionaire

The Moroccan Treaty

(Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

PAUL LANE had spent two weeks in Paris, in daily communication with Jean Rosny, secretary to the League of Lost Causes. But though he had learned many things he had not yet learned the identity of the mysterious woman at whose bidding he had gone to Europe to sacrifice his millions for an impracticable ideal.

Of the gigantic scope of the new secret movement he had, however, formed a tolerably clear idea. Working in different countries and under various guises, it aimed always at the various end: the revival of the monarchical idea in Europe, and, in particular, the restoration of the ancient lines of kings. In England its object was to discredit the monarchy by stirring up social disquietude, with the ultimate end of "replacing the Hanoverian dynasty by a representative of the Stuarts. In France, ignoring the Bonapartes, it aimed to revive the glories of the Orleans family. In Sweden it supported the heirs of the Vasa dynasty against the plebeian descendants of Napoleon's marshal, Bernadotte, of peasant birth, who occupied the throne. It was for Manoel in Portugal, for the Sobieski dynasty in Poland, for the heirs to the old Tuscan and Sicilian kingdoms in Italy. And everywhere it was supported by men of the highest rank and position, who had turned against democracy and looked back with loving reverence upon the traditions of the past.

At the head of this formidable confederacy was believed to be Alfonso of Spain, that irresponsible, boyish ruler whose adventurous, chafing spirit typified the revolt of the old against the new. Himself a Bourbon and a close friend of the deposed Manoel of Portugal, he led the lesser potentates who were allied with him. Against this league of the "Reds," as they were contemptuously termed by their opponents, the kings and statesmen of the more powerful countries had allied themselves in a union which, supposed to have its headquarters in Paris, was called the "Black" cabinet. The struggle was none the less profound because knowledge of it was confined almost entirely to the chancelleries of Europe.

On the fifteenth morning after his arrival in Paris Jean Rosny called upon Paul Lane at his hotel. After an informal chat the Frenchman suddenly became very serious.

"You were saying to me only yesterday, my friend, that you feared we cared more for your millions than for yourself," he said. "You have begged that you be permitted to display your worth in our movement, to make yourself invaluable to our cause. The league is in urgent need of one who shall go on a delicate mission. You speak Spanish as well as you do French, I believe?"

"Yes," answered Paul. "I spent two years in Buenos Aires as representative of my father's firm."

"Excellent, my dear Paul. Then let me describe the situation to you. You are aware that events of moment are impending in Morocco? You have read of them in the newspapers, of course, and have made no sense out of them, as with us all. England, France, Spain, and Germany seem to be striving each to obtain possession of that unhappy country. The real situation is this:

"England and France are united in their opposition to Germany. Each side is desperately endeavoring to checkmate the other there. Meanwhile Spain—our poor Spain, who alone of all nations is entitled to the reversion of the Moorish empire—is powerless in the face of her mighty antagonists. Her claims are put forward by Alfonso for a purpose as yet unsuspected: to set Europe by the ears. In other words, if Spain can induce the Sultan to assign to her the protectorate of the country, England and France will be at the throat of Germany, whose puppet they believe Spain to be. And so it is necessary to induce the Sultan to sign a protectorate over his country to Spain. You understand, Paul?"

"A difficult problem," answered Paul thoughtfully. "Even the Moorish Sultan is not going to barter away his empire."

"On the contrary," answered Rosny, "the Sultan dreads and fears France, whose envoys are even now approaching Fez, the capital, with a treaty in their hands. The Sultan and the Moors still hold a more exaggerated idea of the power of Spain than she is entitled, I fear, to expect. If you can forestall the Frenchmen, you will accomplish all that the league asks of you. Of course Spain will gain nothing by it, but at least there will be the chance of a European war and the consequent weakening of the power of England and Germany, our strongest enemies, not to speak of the possibility of a restoration of the Orleans house in France."

Paul Lane was astounded at the scheme. Kingdoms and empires seemed but as checker pieces to the daring minds behind the conspiracy. He faltered as he asked:

"One moment, Rosny. Is—does Mademoiselle know of my projected mission?"

"It is at her own suggestion," Rosny answered. "And by your successful accomplishment of it, my friend, you will undoubtedly win favor with her and hasten the day when her identity will be revealed to you and you will acquire high rank in our councils."

Jean Rosny had shrewdly guessed Paul Lane's secret. The American blushed like a schoolboy; then, rising, he answered:

"I shall be ready to start when you instruct me."

"Good," answered the other. "Now, Paul, you will have cause to exercise diplomacy, for the Frenchmen are utilizing the services of a very notorious character—none less than Mademoiselle Guepin."

"Of the Moulin Rouge?" cried Paul in surprise.

"Precisely. It will not be the first time that France will have made use of her women for the accomplishment of her purposes. The Sultan is notoriously susceptible to the charms of the other sex, and it is said that Mademoiselle Guepin has already reached Fez, installed herself in the household of the Shereef, the Sultan's principal wife, and begun to acquire an unbounded influence over her and him. So you see, Paul, that you have a hard problem to solve. Waste no time, then, but take the next steamship from Marseilles to Tangiers, and then—good luck to you!"

Two days later Paul Lane sailed for Morocco. In his pocket he carried bills and gold coin to the value of $20,000. It was a case in which, as it seemed to him, the possession of money would play a considerable part. He longed to acquit himself well of his mission. All the way across the Mediterranean he dreamed of the beautiful unknown Austrian whom he had met only to lose so swiftly upon the shores of Long Island. That was two months ago. Then he had been nothing but a glorified clerk in the huge industrial mill of New York—now he was playing a man's part in the world, as he had always longed to do.

At Tangiers he spent several days, familiarizing himself with the conditions of the country. Then, purchasing camels and the necessary outfit, he joined a caravan which was proceeding into the interior under the protection of a bodyguard of French troops.

He was amazed to find that the presence of the Guepin woman was already known to the men, and even the purpose of her mission. Her life had been an adventurous one. Born on the road, into a company of strolling players, she had acquired a reputation second to none among the adventures of olden times. Ministers of state, publicists, leaders of France had fallen victims to her before it occurred to some high dignitary of France to utilize her for the conquest of the Moorish Sultan. She had arrived in Tangiers a month or two before, and had gone into the interior with a circus company, then parading throughout Morocco with its trained lions and performing elephants, to the intense delight of the natives. After a week in the capital the circus manager had withdrawn toward the coast, loaded with honors—but Guepin had remained, the protégée of the Sultan's principal lady in her magnificent house in Fez.

So much Lane learned; further details came to him unexpectedly on the tenth morning, when there came straggling along the road the remnants of the very circus which had taken Guepin to Fez.

"Never again do I enter Africa, monsieur," said the proprietor to Paul as they sat that night over the campfire. "Had I not gone to Fez I should now be in possession of my animals—the finest lot that ever left France, and all imported by me from Monsieur Hagenbeck's menagerie at Hamburg and of my own training. Now—see what is left! Assuredly France must recompense me for my losses."

"But his majesty's presents—" interrupted Paul.

"Gone, all gone, monsieur," cried the owner, wringing his hands. "Stolen by the accursed Moors. And the star of my collection, the beautiful and unrivaled Mademoiselle Guepin—even she is lost to me. Ah, monsieur, I worshipped that woman with blind devotion. And she left me for what? For a Moor, monsieur, a negro—for what else are these Arabs but negroes masquerading as a branch of the white race? For a black man and a handful of jewels! It is a treasure house, that palace in Fez, such as might turn the head of any woman. The marvels, monsieur! There are moving picture displays, the crowns of gold, rubies and sapphires and pearls as large as eggs; mechanical toys and guns of gold and silver—it is the wonder of the world! O, for an hour inside and a stout wagon in which to pack my choice of plunder, drawn by Mahmud, my old elephant."

"But why the elephant?" asked Paul.

"Because, Monsieur, Mahmud would pull a load equivalent to that of a dozen horses," answered the circus man.

"And this Mahmud of yours?"

"Alas, he too is in Fez. He would not leave Mademoiselle Guepin, for she had acquired a wonderful power over him. It was a strange contrast, that frail, delicate, woman, and the great beast. A rogue elephant he was, monsieur, a furious monster of whom all stood in dread. Even I could hardly manage him. But Mademoiselle Guepin could make him heed her lightest word, and by reason of her power over him she has acquired the reputation of a prophetic among the superstitious Moors. They say," he continued, "that she is a secret agent of France. Of that I know nothing, except that all women love to intrigue. At any rate, if France does not make use of that admirable woman she will not be the France I know and love, for with her aid Morocco is already hers."

Paul was greatly impressed by the circus owner's naive confidences. Here was a problem requiring all the strength of his courage and the resources of his brain. A treacherous ruler, a beautiful, unscrupulous woman, and a rogue elephant. It was in the guise of a concession walls of solid masonry, through a bronze door which the minister opened and immediately closed behind him. Paul found himself alone, completely shut off from access to the other portions of the palace—no, not alone, for there, in the center of the court, confronting him with raised trunk and gleaming tusks, was a huge bull elephant.

As Paul stared at this apparition the monster trumpeted shrilly and rushed toward him, swinging its trunk like an enormous flail. There existed no doubt whatever as to its intentions. Paul dodged agilely and ran past the beast, which, too bulky to turn swiftly, butted its massive forehead against the masonry immediately behind the place which Paul had occupied.

"The passage to the halls of paradise is always a difficult one, monsieur," exclaimed a charming female voice. "Walk through! Mahmud will not longer desire to hurt you. In front of you is a door in the masonry."

Stumbling forward, humiliated and chagrined, Paul found the entrance, so cunningly set in the wall that it had escaped his notice. He entered an apartment decorated sumptuously in the French style, to find himself confronting a woman of about thirty years, attractive of face, but somewhat bold of aspect, and dressed in the latest Parisian fashion.

"So you are the gentleman who given much to have the freedom of the French camp again.

After waiting for half an hour in dire perplexity he began to examine his surroundings.

There was a large hall adjoining the room in which he sat, and Paul strolled into it. It was a small, narrow chamber without outlet, and evidently formed the innermost portion of the palace, for it was heaped with an astonishing display of treasures.

A sound at the outside door distracted him from his speculations and he passed back hastily into the ante-room, just in time to give the impression of having been waiting there to a short, fat, black-bearded man of middle age, attired in an immaculate white robe and turban, who strode fiercely in, accompanied by the cringing interpreter whom Paul had left at the palace gates. Behind them appeared the Frenchwoman. She smiled at Paul no longer but ranged herself at the side of the Sultan and began speaking in passionate tones. He listened and nodded, then spoke curtly to the interpreter.

"What do you want?" asked the latter briskly of Paul.

"Tell him," said Paul slowly, "that I will speak with him in the presence of his council."

The woman interpreted, and the Sultan's brow darkened. He scowled savagely at Paul.

"His majesty says that he will speak with you in the presence of his surrounding the market place, were thousands of Moors, and they were all uttering exultant cries and pointing at the prisoner. And in the center of the court, a writhing blur of black against the white pavement flags, was the rogue elephant, struggling in the chains which 50 men held in their iron sockets fixed in the ground, and trumpeting earth-shaking blasts.

Muley Abdul stood up and a sudden hush fell upon the assemblage, so that his thin tones were clearly audible on all sides of the market place. He spoke, and cackles and shouts of derision punctuated his sentences. When he had concluded his speech the interpreter rose and addressed Paul Lane.

"His majesty says," he began, "that you are a Spaniard who has come here to steal away this country. Therefore, you shall test your strength against France in the market place. If you conquer, then Morocco will place herself under the protection of your country, but if you lose you will be torn to pieces by the wild elephant. Let Allah decide!"

Paul did not wholly understand, but he was not long in doubt when, with a bound that would have done credit to any acrobat, Mademoiselle Guepin flung aside her cloak and sprang into the market place, displaying herself, a commanding figure in tights and spangles, while a long Spanish cloak, such as matadors wear, dropped from her shoulders and fluttered in the wind at every motion. As she advanced, the Moors, at her shouted command, released the chains which held the elephant, and the great beast leaped to its feet and stood unsteadily in the center of the open space, trumpeting shrilly, while hanging from its neck and legs the stout chains clanked at every movement. With its angry little eyes peering out on either side of its enormous trunk, its curved tusks, sharp as scimitars, menacingly thrust forward, it was a spectacle to appal the stoutest heart.

Yet, when Mademoiselle Guepin approached it dropped its trunk, quivered, and sank on its knees before her. Thus, with head humbly lowered, it received her caresses.

Mademoiselle Guepin arose and leaped aside. She whispered in the elephant's ear and motioned to it to rise. Then, standing some distance away, with folded arms she quietly surveyed Paul as he stood waiting the onset of the great lumbering beast.

The elephant stood watching him. Another word from the woman and it broke into a shrill scream of fury, raised its trunk, and bore down upon the American. He stood, appalled by the terror of the spectacle, until it was within five yards of him; then he sprang to one side and let the monster career past him. A shout of delight went up from the throats of the encircling multitude. This was the finest man-baiting sport that they had seen.

The elephant turned and charged down upon Paul again. Again he sprang to one side, but this time the beast was warier. It turned also, missed him, but the sweep of its trunk was so near that Paul felt a thrill of terror go through him. The stoutest nerves could not endure that long. It was a question of moments only. He looked up; in front of him the guards had ranged themselves, with drawn swords, before their sovereign; a hostile wall of Moors ringed him; in the center of the market-place Mademoiselle Guepin stood watching, smiling, anticipating her triumph. Paul turned and ran blindly, panting, his fingers clenched at his sides.

They closed on something in his hip pocket and, as he ran, he drew it forth. He stared at it without comprehension. The monster was close behind. He turned; the elephant turned too, and there ensued again that hideous flight and that pursuit. But Paul was staring at the thing in his hand now, and beginning to remember how it had come there. He had absent-mindedly pocketed it while in the apartments of the Sultan. It was a clockwork mouse.

Again the swish of that flail of a trunk went through the air. Paul turned. This time the elephant was prepared for his manoeuvre, but it did not know which way he would turn. It stopped still, swinging its trunk and watching him with its little evil eyes. Paul dodged backward, gained twenty yards—and set down the mouse upon the ground. It whirled and rushed straight toward the monster.

The trunk went down. The beast stood still. A shrill scream broke from it—and suddenly it turned tail and bolted away, terror-stricken, across the market-place. Its bulk between Paul and Mademoiselle Guepin, she had not seen the cause of its confusion. But as it rushed toward her she looked and saw; and with piercing shrieks, the Honeycomb of Paradise and Footstool of Gabriel cast her cloak over her head and ran also—ran through the clusters of laughing, howling Moors out of the market place and up the long street toward the palace of the Sultan, crying for aid, her skirts drawn taut. But far in front of her, roaring with fear and dismay, lumbered the bulky form of Mahmud, the rogue elephant, seeking the safety of its cemented, walled, mouse-proof enclosure.

Paul Lane drew from his pocket the draft of the treaty of protectorate and went up to the place where the Sultan sat.

"Allah has decided," he said to the interpreter, and held out the document.

And in big, painted Arabic letters the shadow of Allah affixed his signature.

hunter that he went to the Sultan's palace immediately after his arrival, leaving his equipment in the French camp outside the walls. French troops were in possession of the citadel, the city was French—but Morocco was not yet French, and technically France was merely his majesty's ally against the rebellious tribes. Paul found everything in confusion at the palace. The Sultan, morose and despondent, had shut himself up in his palace with his favorite wife, the Shereef. He had executed two of his ministers as traitors and had dismissed the remainder, had cut off all relations with the French garrison, and alternately planned war upon them and sent presents to Commander Caillard, in token of fealty. Under plea of indisposition the Sultan refused to see them. France was growing impatient; the treaty must be signed acknowledging the French protectorate. If Paul could present his credentials and obtain his majesty's signature the French would be checkmated and the struggle would be transferred to the chancelleries of Madrid and Paris, while England and Germany would instantaneously mobilize their war-fleets.

"Tell him," said Paul to his interpreter, a shrewd old Moor whom he had engaged at a lavish wage and pledged to silence, "tell him that I wish to speak with him upon a matter concerning the Khalifate."

Much mystified, Paul entered the palace courtyard, passed through a number of rooms, richly adorned with arabesques and hung with carpets of brilliant hues, and emerged into a small open space with high wishes to see the Sultan," said the young woman. "You may state your wants to me. What nation do you represent?"

"I am the secretary of a syndicate in Brussels, madam," said Paul glibly. "We desire a land concession for the discovery of rubber, which is believed to grow profusely near Cape Juba. If his majesty will see me—" She looked at him and laughed impudently.

"There is no rubber near Cape Juba," she answered. "Rubber is associated with moist climates and tropical verdure, my dear Paul Lane."

Paul started up in confusion.

"No, but you must assuredly see his majesty after having gone through such perils," said the young woman. "As a representative of the interests of—Spain, is it not? Pardon me if I am forgetful, for we have so many applicants, seeking to wring something from poor Morocco—as a representative of Spain you must not be allowed to return without having accomplished something. Besides," she added, "Mahmud is very angry about something this morning, and, hard as the journey was, the return from the palace will perhaps prove still more arduous."

She ushered him into a large ante-room. "If you will wait here I will summon his majesty and your interpreter," she said and the door clicked behind her. Paul tried it. It was locked.

At that moment, in the clutches of his enemy, who had evidently obtained secret information of his arrival, trapped in the gin into which he had so foolishly stepped, Paul would have council, as you have requested, tomorrow morning," said the interpreter. "Will you have the goodness to come this way?"

At the door half a dozen soldiers sprang from the ground, where they had been squatting in the Moorish fashion. Without violence, but imperatively, they compelled Paul to accompany them through numerous corridors and rooms, each of which was concealed by a heavy curtain, until they arrived at a small cell, plainly furnished in the European fashion. Paul spent the rest of the day there and the night that came after, not tasting the food which was brought to him for fear of poison.

When the first shafts of the rising sun struck through his window his captors unlocked the door and ushered him into a closed carriage, drawn by two Arab stallions, which waited outside in the courtyard. One of the men entered with him; the blinds were drawn across the carriage windows, and they drove for an interminable period. When at last the carriage halted and Paul descended he was almost blinded by the blaze of fierce, tropical sunlight which beat upon him, so that for some time he could hardly grasp his relationship to the outside world.

He was in the palace no longer but in the great market-place of the city of Fez. He stood before a sort of raised dais, on which squatted the Moorish Sultan, close beside him, Mademoiselle Guepin, resting upon a pile of cushions, while ranged around him were his councillors and bodyguard. Extending thence in the form of a large circle, completely

30,000 VOICES!

And Many Are the Voices of Seymour People.

Thirty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney and bladder pills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Seymour people are in this chorus. Here's a Seymour case:

L. C. Thomas, stock dealer, 119 S. Lynn St., Seymour, Ind., says, "I cannot say that I have had a moment's freedom from backache and kidney trouble until just lately when I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I had been suffering from a dull, heavy pain in the small of my back and had a tired, nervous feeling that clung to me for days at a time. My kidneys were disordered and caused me much trouble. The many statements I read in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills led me to try them. They lived up to representations and soon brought relief. Whenever I feel in need of a tonic for my kidneys, I use Doan's Kidney Pills with good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.

Cape to Cairo Rival.

The French project for a trans-African railroad from Algiers to Cape Town, using the Belgian-English line from Stanleyville to Cape Town, has taken definite form. In January, says the Scientific and Mining Press, an expedition to make a preliminary survey from Colomb-Bechar to the present southern terminus of the Algerian railroad, to Lake Tchad, started out from the former point. The engineers believe that the crossing of the Sahara desert presents no unsurmountable difficulties. From Lake Tchad the line will presumably follow the divide between the Sharo and Nile basins and will enter the Belgian Congo at Semlo on the Rovu river, from there going to Stanleyville.

Defects of Steel Ties.

The use of steel ties on foreign railroads is not universally successful. Mr. Braet, engineer in chief of the Belgian State railways, informs Engineering News that the steel ties are unsatisfactory under high speed traffic. The Netherlands State Railways company has abandoned their use because of the expense. Engineering authority in this country discontinue them, stating that none of the foreign steel ties in use are strong enough to bear the heavy trains and the driving axle loads of 50,000 and 60,000 pounds on the American trunk line railways.

GOOD ROADS

DISTRIBUTE COST OF ROADS

Let Money Spent Be Levied Upon Assessed Valuation of State—New York Plan Favored.

Country roads should be built and maintained from the funds of the general public. No public road is of purely local importance; no community nor industry but is in some degree dependent upon the efficiency of all highways. Since the development of automobiles, more than half the traffic on the average country road is purely city traffic. Why should townships, for instance, be made to bear their equal share for road expense regardless of wealth and resources, when the roads to be built benefit neighboring communities and even distant cities as much, and sometimes more, than the immediate locality. Roads are the arteries and veins of commerce. Because some of them are remote from the heart of trade does not lessen their significance to the whole.

Let money spent for roads be levied upon the assessed valuation of the state, says the Farm and Home. In Illinois, for instance, 67 per cent. of the total taxable property is located in incorporated cities and towns. Should the 33 per cent. comprising country property bear all the burden for building and maintaining the highways? By means of state and county appropriations, or state and county bonds, or both, equitably divided, the road burden would be more fairly distributed. The New York plan of dividing the cost between state, county and town works very well and is probably as fair and just as any that could be devised.

TO TAX TOBACCO FOR ROADS

Representative Warburton of Washington Has Novel Plan to Raise $80,000,000 Yearly.

The constructing of a comprehensive system of national highways out of a tax imposed upon the consumers of tobacco is a proposition which Representative Warburton of Washington has embodied in the form of a bill introduced in the house. He proposes that a tax shall be imposed so light as not to be felt by the users of tobacco, but every puff of smoke from burning tobacco will represent a part of a system of highways.

The plan contemplates trunk lines connecting the capitals of the different states with the national capital at Washington and with each other and running to the different national parks. The cost of construction is to be paid out of a tax similar to that of 1879 on tobacco. It is calculated that the tax will raise $80,000,000 a year, or more than twice the amount of internal revenue now collected.

UNITED STATES GOOD ROADS

Estimated That Percentage of Improved Thoroughfares Gone Well Beyond Nine Per Cent.

In the past three years it is roughly estimated that the percentage of improved roads in the United States has gone well beyond 9 per cent. and possibly close to 10 per cent. It is estimated that if 20 per cent. of the public highways were improved—each highway being selected and improved with a view to the proportionate traffic upon it—a high degree of efficiency in highway transportation would be reached. It is figured that millions of dollars would be saved annually in the transportation of crops, the wear and tear on horses and vehicles, and in the minimizing of the waste in truck farming. Where roads are bad, the farmers frequently find it impossible to get their products to the shipping points and thus perishable products are wasted, perceptibly increasing the cost of living.

Eradication of Dandelion.
The best way to get rid of the dandelion pest is to devise some use for them. The moment they become valuable that moment it is going to require a lot of trouble to produce them.

Crossing Is Harmful.
No flock owner can achieve success in the breeding of sheep, either for market or breeding purposes, if he resorts to constant crossing of two different breeds to improve his flock.
